

The Lamb
{Parody of Bette Midler's The Rose}

Some say God must love all people for all eternity
God says "No!"—not fags and enablers
Traitors steal His glory

Some say God's all love and no hate
And mock His glorious wrath
God says "Watch!"—there is a sure fate
My glistening sword's blood bath

It's the hearts of His dear people
He covers with His wings
It's the obedient humble servant
It's them He heals—and sees

It's the lamb whose soul is shaken
To them His love He gives
And the soul afraid of dying
He promises they will live

When His sheep are feeling lonely
From your speeches hard and long
Heaven's strains – for His lambs only
Lift their hearts and make them strong

Just remember – when we enter
Into our new heavenly home
When you screamed, "God loves proud sinners!"
You brought wrath from the Lamb's throne!