

God Has Sent Us (Parody of Bette Midler's
"From A Distance")

God has sent us—to tell you brutes so mean
All things are plain in his sight
God has sent us—his fiery wrath a stream Evil angels all take flight

God has sent us—there is mutiny
And it echoes through the land
It's the voice of lies, it's the voice of sin,
It's the voice of evil man

God has sent us—to bind you with this cup—
For your grievous and evil deeds God has used his guns, and bombs, and disease
To bring you to your knees

God has sent us—you are his instruments under his restraining hand
You will have no hope; you will have no peace
Cuz you hate all God's commands

God is watching you. He sees all you do.
He is watching your resistance.

God has sent us—you hate us, his dear friends-- and with him you are all at war God has sent us—we see you, so don't pretend-- It's your sin that you're fighting for

And it echoes through this land And he's left you no hope—it's his lambs he loves He'll destroy the rest of man

He gave mankind hope—for obedience
But you rejected Christ, the man

And God is watching you—he sees all you do God is watching you—chasing your lust Oh God is watching you, God is watching, watching, watching you—cuz he sent us!
